MANHEIM, December 29.

Yesterday evening we received the important intelligence, that the Duke of Brunswick had driven the French from the Valley of Anweiler with the loss of twenty or twenty-five pieces of cannon, and their military chest containing three millions in gold, as well as insignia.

Landau is again blockaded. The fall of that place depends upon a decisive battle which cannot fail to take place. This morning a strong cannonade has been heard.

We are assured that General Jordan commands the Convention army in Alsace.

DOVER, January 9.

The French have gained some advantage over the allied armies in Alsace, by being in possession again of some little towns. Great preparations are making by the Allies, particularly by the prince of Cobourg, to take the field again as soon as possible.

LONDON, January 8.

The duke of Brunswick is said to have gained a complete victory over the French at Anweiler on the 25th, and Wurmsfer is said to have regained the position which he had on the 24th. It is said, that Landau is still blockaded. There are some doubts about the authenticity of these accounts.

Several hundreds of burghers, without distinction of profession or rank, are working at the ramparts at Frankfort.

January 9.

Letters from Mannheim and Frankfort, of the 9th and 30th instant, speak pretty confidently of a victory gained by the duke of Brunswick over the French, in the valley of Anweiler, on the 28th. We are sorry to add, that these are not confirmed by any official intelligence.

January 10.

The Flanders mail which arrived this day brings the confirmation of the raising of the blockade of Landau, and the re-passage of the Rhine by the Austrian and Prussian armies, who, after so many victories gained, and the greatest hardship suffered with the utmost patience and heroism, were obliged to yield at last to superior numbers of the Sans Culottes, who, ever since the 22d ult, with a force reckoned at 180,000 men, and a numerous and formidable artillery, made the most desperate attacks upon general Wurmsfer and the duke of Brunswick.

On the 25th Prince of Hohenlohe was slightly wounded.

On the 26th the duke of Brunswick attempted to make an attack, but the French got the start of him, and after the most bloody conflict, the Prussians and the Austrians were obliged to retreat.

On the 26th, the Cordon of general Wurmsfer was also obliged to retreat, after an immense quantity of blood shed on both sides. All the inhabitants of Haguenau and Wexembourg, apprehensive lest they should experience the fate of the Lyonsese, took flight at the approach of the Patriots who pursued them under the cannon of fort Louis.

Many of the unfortunate fugitives were killed by the cannon from the forests, and were obliged to pass the whole night under the bare heavens before they could be admitted.

The French were before Spire on the 29th, and the Military Hospital of the Prussians has been removed thence.

From Haguenau to Spire all the inhabitants fled, and those of the duchy of Deux Ponts, have had recourse to the same measures.

The head quarters of general Wurmsfer were on the 31st ult. at Schweitzingen, two leagues from Heidelberg.

The head quarters of the duke of Brunswick were at Oppenheim. Letters from Mentz of the 31st ult. state, that the Republicans are masters of Gernheim, Neustadt and Spire.

Mannheim, is putting into a respectable state of defence, and has an Austrian garrison.

The elector of Mentz has left his capital with a part of his retinue, and is gone to Altschaffenburg.

NEW-YORK, March 29.

The night before last two English Vessels stole away from this port, notwithstanding they knew of the embargo; and the collector having been informed of it yesterday morning, requested the Brigadier General of the Militia of this State to assist him in pursuing and bringing them back to port; in consequence of which, the time being too short to call out a detachment from the militia, a number of our patriotic fellow-citizens, of different regiments, stepped into the Custom house boat, under the command of an officer, and proceeded up the East river—shortly after which, the two brave vessels were safely moored in our harbor.

Captain Humstead informs, that at the time of his sailing from St. Kitts, (19 days ago,) no accounts had been received there of the surrender of Martinique.

April 5.

Last Thursday the commissioners appointed to direct the fortifications proposed at this port, went down to the Narrows; and yesterday, they proceeded to Governors Island to examine and determine on the most proper places to erect forts and other works for the defence of the city and harbor.

NEW-YORK, April 9.

From the St. Etienne Gazette of March 14, 1794.

KING'S SPEECH.

The following is his Britannic Majesty's speech, delivered at the House of Parliament on the 21st day of January, 1794.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

THE circumstances under which you are assembled, require your most serious attention.

We are engaged in a contest, on the issue of which depends the maintenance of our constitution, laws and religion, and the security of all civil society.

You must have observed, with satisfaction, the advantages which have been obtained by the arms of the Allied powers, and the change which has taken place in the general situation of Europe, since the commencement of the war. The United Provinces have been protected from invasion. The Austrian Netherlands have been recovered and maintained; and places of considerable importance have been acquired on the frontiers of France. The recapture of Mentz, and the subsequent successes of the allied armies on the Rhine, have, notwithstanding the advantages recently obtained by the enemy in that quarter, proved highly beneficial to the common cause. Powerful efforts have been made by my allies in the South of Europe. The temporary possession of the town and port of Toulon has greatly distressed the operations of my enemies; and in the circumstances attending the evacuation of that place an important and decisive blow has been given to their naval power, by the distinguished conduct, abilities, and spirit of my commanders, officers and forces, both by sea and land. The French have been driven from their possessions and fishery at Newfoundland; and important and valuable acquisitions have been made both in the East and West Indies.

At sea our superiority has been undisputed, and our commerce so effectually protected, that the losses sustained have been inconceivable in proportion to its extent, and to the captures made on the contracted trade of the enemy.

The circumstances by which the further progress of the allies has hitherto been impeded, not only prove the necessity of vigour and perseverance on our part, but at the same time confirm the expectation of ultimate success. Our enemies have derived the means of temporary exertion, from a system which enabled them to dispose arbitrarily of the lives and property of a numerous people, and which openly violates every restraint of justice, humanity and religion. But these efforts, productive as they have necessarily been of internal discontent and confusion in France, have also tended rapidly to exhaust the natural and real strength of that country.

Although I cannot but regret the necessary continuance of the war, I should still consult the essential interests of my people if I were desirous of peace, on any grounds but such as may provide for their permanent safety, and the independence and security of Europe. The attainment of these ends is still obstructed by the prevalence of a system in France, equally incompatible with the happiness of that country, and with the tranquillity of all other nations.

Under this impression I thought proper to make a declaration of the views and principles by which I am guided. I have ordered a copy of this declaration to be laid before you together with copies of several conventions and treaties with different powers, by which you will perceive how large a part of Europe is united in a cause of such general concern.

I reflect, with unspeakable satisfaction, on the steady loyalty and firm attachment to the established constitution and government, which, notwithstanding the continued efforts employed to mislead and seduce, have been to generally prevalent among all ranks of people. These sentiments have been eminently manifested in the zeal and alacrity of the militia to provide for our internal defence, and in the distinguished bravery and spirit displayed on every occasion by my forces, both by sea and land. They have maintained the lustre of the British name, and have shewn themselves worthy of the blessings which it is the object of all our exertions to preserve.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons.

I have ordered the necessary estimates and accounts to be laid before you; and I am persuaded you will be ready to make such provision as the exigency of the times may require. I feel too sensible the repeated proofs, which I have received of the affection of my subjects, not to lament the necessity of any additional burthens. It is, however a great consolation to me to observe the favorable state of the revenue, and complete success of the measure, which was last year adopted for removing the embarrassments affecting commercial credit.

Great must be the extent of our exertions, I trust you will be enabled to provide for them in such a manner as to avoid any prejudice which could be severely felt by my people.

My Lords and Gentlemen.

In all your deliberations you will undoubtedly bear in mind the true grounds and origin of the war.

An attack was made on us and our allies, founded on principles which tend to destroy all property, to subvert the laws and religion of every civilized nation, and to introduce universally that wild & destructive system of rapine, anarchy, and barbarity, the effects of which, as they have already been manifested in France, furnish a dreadful but useful lesson to the present age, and to posterity.

It only remains for us to continue to persevere in our united exertions; their discontinuance or relaxation could hardly procure even a short interval of delusive repose, and could never terminate in security of peace. Impressed with the necessity of defending all that is most dear to us, and relying, as we may with confidence, on the valour and resources of the nation, on the combined efforts of so large a part of Europe, and, above all, the incontestible justice of our cause, let us render our conduct a contrast to that of our enemies, and, by cultivating and practising the principles of humanity and the duties of religion, endeavor to merit the continuance of the divine favor and protection, which have been to eminently experienced, by these kingdoms.

It is reported, that the Ambuscade frigate, lately fell in with the Hollar, British frigate, and a Bermudian privateer, which the engaged both together, and after an obstinate battle, took, and sent them into that port, where they safely arrived last Thursday.

* No port is mentioned in the New-York paper.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.

Letters from New-York by this day's mail says, that reports are received, by vessels from the West Indies, that a French fleet is arrived there.

We have since learnt from the best authority, that the above account is true, and that in the fleet, are seven sail of the line.

This morning between three & four o'clock, a fire broke out in the Brewery, in Brewer's alley, near Vine street, which, notwithstanding every exertion was made to extinguish it, entirely consumed the inside of the building, with its contents.

April 9.

By a letter from New-York, dated Monday last, it appears that eight sail of French ships of the line had arrived in the West Indies from Breit, with 5000 soldiers, which had, it was said, blockaded the English fleet there.

April 10.

Extract of a letter from Newark, dated April 8.

"Mr. B. informs of the arrival of a schooner at New-York on Saturday, from St. Lucia, in 17 days—the Captain relates that a fleet of eight sail of the line had arrived at Martinique from France and had landed 5000 men, who had cut off the communication between the French army and fleet."

"The captain saw the fleet sailing for Port-Royal bay, in which the doughty Sir John Jervis, was to anchor—we may reasonably expect therefore that the siege of Martinique may be converted into an attack on Jamaica."

"The Sans Culottes it is said, were furnished with only 3 rounds, and were ordered to rely on the bayonet."

There are letters in town from Antigua, of the 15th March, and from St. Eustatia of the 20th, to a respectable merchant of this city—which say that the condemnation of American property has ceased in the islands, since the receipt of the late instructions from the British government.

A letter from Salem of the 5th of March says, "A vessel is arrived at Marblehead from Bilbao, which left that place the 30th of January, and brings an account that the Prussians had left the combined armies and returned home."

BALTIMORE, April 3.

Exact account of the battles fought by the French against the Austrian army, commanded by general Wurmer, on the 20th and 30th of November and the 1st and 2d of December, as given in the Leyden Gazette.

The French, whose number was incredibly increased, advanced in four columns: the first towards the Severn, another by passing Biele towards the valley of Anweiler; the third, which was the most numerous, being 30,000 men strong, towards the defiles of Lautern, and against the army commanded by the Duke of Brunswick in person: whilst the fourth endeavored to penetrate by Hunder between Treves and Muffenheim.

On the 5th of the days marked by these bloody battles, (November 29,) the French having been drawn by a false retreat under the cannon of the Prussian batteries, were attacked in front by the cavalry, whilst on their flank the Artillery made the most terrible ravages. The French attacked at once all the Prussian intrenchments and redoubts: still more furious they made a second assault—the carnage was still greater on both sides. They fought like lions.

The day after, they repeated their efforts with the same valor. On the 1st of December the enemy assembled in force near Ramstein. Same day the French attacked, in every quarter, the Austrian army commanded by general Wurmer, and the corps of French emigrants, at the head of which was the Prince of Conde, with the Duke of Bourbon his son, and the Duke of Engin his grandson.

The day after, (December 2d,) there was another dreadful battle, which lasted the whole day, and the French were forced to retreat beyond Strasburg. The Austrians lost the brave general count Kiehlitz; the Prussian general De Kleit was killed. The loss of the French, says the Leyden Gazette, is very great; the most moderate estimations, even those of their own deserters, reckon it at 10,000 killed, wounded or prisoners. They fought rather like furies and lions than soldiers, making their attacks with ardor, and incessantly crying LANDAU OR DEATH! throwing themselves on the very bayonets of their enemies, and encountering the cannon even to the very foot of the batteries.

The most experienced generals agree, that they never saw such an obstinate animosity, and such a contempt for the losses which they sustained; a contempt which some attribute to insatiation, aided by the enthusiasm of liberty; others to the facility with which the conventionalists can recruit their armies, from amongst a nation which has no other resource than War.

There was even found among the dead a great number of women, disguised as soldiers.

Our readers will observe, that the actions of which the above is a detail, were followed by those of the 22d, 23d, 24th, 25th and 26th of December, and that on the last of these days, the allies were completely routed, and forced to retreat to Spire and Mentz.

April 10.

Extract of a letter from the captain of an American vessel, to his owners in this place, dated Falmouth, January 8.

"A report is current here, and generally believed, that immediately after the meeting of Parliament, Great Britain will declare war against America."

"In consequence of the instructions issued on the 6th of November, upwards of 300 privateers have been fitted out, from the different ports of the kingdom: one of which sent in here, a few days ago, the ship Active, of Philadelphia, with a cargo valued at fifty thousand pound. She is condemned, and is to be sold for the benefit of the captors. A war between America and England appears certain—it is the common topic, and expected by every body. By the King's proclamation we are liable to seizure—but as we have put in here in distress, I presume the rigor of the law will not be enforced."

"This day sailed from here, a large fleet under convoy, for the Baltic. A Spanish 74 gun ship, with 500,000 dollars on board, is now lying here: it is part of the cash intended for government, on account of the Nootka-Sound business."

ALEXANDRIA, April 12.

On Thursday evening the schooner Paragon, Captain Eveleigh, arrived here from Barbadoes. By a paper which he brought, we find, that the Chesterfield Packet, Capt. Jones, had arrived at Barbadoes in 23 days from Falmouth, with the second January Mail.

Captain Eveleigh says he could perceive no difference in the conduct of the British towards the Americans since the promulgation of his Britannic Majesty's instructions of the 8th of January, which were published at Barbadoes ten days previous to his sailing, than what had been practised hitherto. Numbers of the cruisers appear to be fitted out purposely to seize American property. Among the others he was boarded by the schooner Maria, commanded by one Thomas Carey, formerly a resident of the Eastern Shore of Maryland—the was about the size of an oyster boat, and mounted a few swivels. Business has increased so with them latterly, that they have dispensed with the form of "legal adjudications," and now follow a more summary mode, viz. turn the Captain and crew on shore, & then set the cargo up at public auction. During his stay a cargo of rice, in a vessel from Charleston, was sold at public vendue for little more than one half what it cost in Charleston. The proceeds of these sales, he has been informed, are retained in the hands of the agents of government. It was reported in Barbadoes, that all Martinique had been taken by the English, except Fort Bourbon. He, however, is rather of opinion that things in that quarter have been unfavorable, as a packet had arrived at Barbadoes with dispatches to the governor, which were kept secret, and all communication with the crew and officers, except the Captain, prohibited. About twelve miles south of the Capes, he fell in with a French fleet, eleven of which were ships of war.

RICHMOND, April 9.

Extract of a letter from an American, dated at Havre Marzart, December 28, 1793, to his friend in this city.

"I seldom touch upon politics, but am now compelled by the late glorious successes of the French Republic; their armies have been victorious in almost every battle they have fought—they recaptured Toulon the 14th instant, and gave the English and Spaniards a complete drubbing, and was very near taking the English fleet. They have defeated the Prussians, and have entirely dispersed the rebels in La Vendee. Was there ever so brave a nation heard of before? They have now thrown to the world that the cause of liberty will carry every thing before it. It is currently reported here, that Valenciennes is likewise taken, but believe it is not confirmed. I am in hopes that all these successes will be a means of bringing about a peace—for, I believe, the combined powers are now pretty well convinced it is out of their power to make any impression on the French Republic."

FREDERICKSBURG, April 17.
In the House of Representatives on Tuesday the 8th inst. after some observations on the distresses of our seamen who have been captured in the West Indies, Mr. Sherbourne laid on the table the following resolution:

RESOLVED,

That the President of the United States be requested to appoint two or more persons to repair with all convenient speed to the islands of the West Indies, for the purpose of collecting and aiding in their return to the United States, such American seamen as have been captured and carried to these islands by the ships or cruisers of any foreign nation. And that the persons who may be so appointed be further authorized and directed to assist all captains, supercargoes or agents of any American vessels that have been or may be captured and carried to said islands for trial, in the legal defence of their vessels and property.

The same day, the further consideration of Mr. Dayton's resolutions, for suppressing British property, was postponed.

The Senate and House of Representatives of the United States have passed an act, allowing to the unfortunate major general La Fayette, the sum of 24,424 dollars, being the amount of his pay and emoluments while in the service of said States.

A Bird was lately presented to Mr. Peale's Museum, at Philadelphia, which flew on board a vessel passing through the Gulf Stream. It is thought to be the porphyrion Americanus, a very beautiful species of the Brazilian Moor Hen, the very existence of which, has been doubted by several authors.

Lexington, May 10. INDIAN NEWS.

About ten days ago a party of five or six Indians fired on the hands in the Ore bank at the State creek iron works, killed one man and wounded another, who is since dead of his wounds; they were followed about forty miles, but evaded the pursuit.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.

We hear by a schooner just arrived from New Orleans, that the government of Louisiana has made all the military preparations to impede the progress of the French army, that is supposed to be collecting on or near the confluence of the rivers Ohio and Mississippi, under the command of General Clark, and for that purpose has marched a body of militia under the command of General Gist, up to the Walnut Hills.

THE Public are cautioned to beware of counterfeit Five Dollar Bills of the Bank of the United States, and Twenty Dollar Bills of the Bank of North America, several of which have appeared in circulation within a few days past; they are a good general imitation of the genuine Bills but may be distinguished by the following MARKS:

Five Dollar Bills of the Bank of the United States

All that have appeared have the letter F. for their Alphabetical Mark.

The texture of the Paper is thicker and whiter, and it takes the ink more freely than the genuine paper.

The O. in the Word Company is smaller than the M. and other letters of that word, so that a fine extended from the top of the O. to touch the top of the M. would extend considerably above the range of the whole word.

In the word United the letters are narrower and closer together than the rest of the Bill.

The r and j in the word promise are not parallel, the j inclining much more forward than the r.

The engraving is badly executed, the strokes of all the Letters are longer, and the device in the margin particularly is much coarser and appears darker than in the true bills. Some of the counterfeits bear date in 1791—

Whereas the bank was not in operation till December, and no five Dollar Bills were issued that year.

Twenty Dollar Bills of the Bank of North America.

All that have appeared, have the letter L for their alphabetical Mark.

They are printed on a paper nearly similar to that of the counterfeits Five Dollar Notes above described: the engraving is better executed, and they approach nearer to the appearance of the genuine Bills.

The fine ruled lines through the word Twenty, in the body of the Bill, are in number thirteen in the genuine Bills, and but twelve in the counterfeits.

The word Company is much like the same word in the Five Dollar bills as described above, the s being less than the m, and others following.

There is no stroke the t in the word North, whereas in the genuine bills the stroke is well defined.

The letters ent in the word Twenty, to the left hand at the bottom, do not come down to the line, but are so cut as to give an irregular appearance to the word, the T and the y going below them.

The signature J. Nixon, has the appearance of being written with lamp-black and oil, and differs from the other inks used in printing the Bills and the Cashier's signature.

It is supposed these forgeries were committed in some of the Southern States, as all the counterfeits that have appeared, have come from thence, and two persons have been apprehended in Virginia, on suspicion of being the authors of them.

The Reward of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, will be paid to any person or persons who shall discover and procure to conviction the several offenders of the following descriptions or any of them, viz.

The person or persons who manufactured the paper on which the Bills are printed.

The person or persons who engraved the plates.

The printer or printers of the Bills.

Every person who has acted as a principal in any other way, in the counterfeiting and uttering the said Bills.
